

When Being a Monotheist is Guilty of Dualism

- Monotheism: the belief in a single all-powerful god, as opposed to religions that believe in multiple gods. Judaism, Christianity, and Islam are widely practiced forms of monotheism.
- Dualism: the division of something conceptually into two opposed or contrasted aspects, or the state of being so divided.

Here's a perspective you might consider and one I believe will be the norm within 100 years. It's been demonstrated in scientists' labs repeatedly while also being proven by religious figures. That is, consciousness is reality instead of matter. Here are three different resources having said the same thing:

1. "...what we call matter, with its solidity and concreteness—is an illusion. Physics is pointing inexorably to mind." www.scientificamerican.com 3/25/2019.
2. Albert Einstein said "Concerning matter, we have all been wrong. What we have called matter is energy. There is no Matter." He also coined the term "spooky action at a distance", which advances the notion of there being no matter but only mind.
3. "Metaphysics is above physics, and matter does not enter into metaphysical premises or conclusions." Mary Baker Eddy in 1875.

It does not seem blasphemous to accept the possibility of us challenging, overcoming, the laws of matter. To believe otherwise seems no different than accepting Claudius Ptolemy's assertion that the Earth was the center of the universe, whose view persisted for 1,400 years.

You can stand now on the precipice of this understanding today and start celebrating its reality! And in 100 years if not sooner, those believing in matter and metaphysics will be guilty of dualism 😊
